At Beach Cities Health District, Gabriella Fish holds the Communications/Social Media Lead position in the Youth Advisory Council, where she is an activist for social change across a range of subjects including substance abuse, mental health, and sustainability.

She started being an active advocate for climate change in 2014 with the Keep Hermosa Hermosa campaign. The Keep Hermosa Hermosa campaign was an eye opener, as the possibility of oil companies drilling in the South Bay affected not only peoples' health but also the entire biome.

Since then, she has been an advocate for the environment and has participated in several events to keep the beach clean here in the South Bay, as well as overseas, with the Blue Flag Beach program operated by the Foundation for Environmental Education (FEE).
